

Indiana's telephone Privacy law has helped tremendously with the number of solicitation phone calls we receive to our home. These calls are very much UNWANTED by us. We have a phone book and a computer and can look up any thing we need. For example, if we wanted siding on our house we would shop around for it. We would not put siding on our house because someone called and asked us to. We don't want solicitation phone calls.

My husband works third shift and these calls only interrupt his daily sleep. We have caller ID for the purpose of identifying these unwanted calls and it is ridiculous to pay for caller ID to eliminate this very annoying problem. Then, if you DO answer the phone, you have to be rude to the person calling or simply hang up on them (which is rude as well) to get rid of the caller. I would prefer not to be rude to someone.

Finally, I like the way Indiana has handled the problem here by allowing a person to request not to receive these calls, which we have done. As a matter of fact, I feel if a person wants these unsolicited, annoying calls there should be a list that you can sign up to receive them, not the other way around as it is now.

Thank You
